Woodcocks

November - March

Our hunting area for woodcocks, Karabalia, is located between Macedonia, Greece and Bulgaria, on the banks of Lake Dojran. These areas are hot, approximately 60km from the Mediterranean sea, of medium height mountains covered in typical macchia vegetation, very attractive for woodcocks. Woodcocks reach these areas in the end of October and spend the winter, staying until March, when they start their migration. One can easily come across 10 or more woodcocks per day with a good dog, which makes this area one of the best in Europe for this type of birds. The terrain is planes with soft hills with thick vegetation.

Lake Dojran, with its shallow waters on the Macedonia side, covered in thickets, is the ideal habitat for migrating ducks during Spring, while many species spend the winter as well, seeking food close to the shores.

In the areas surrounding the lake quails and turtle doves can be found during the Summer months, while grey partridges may be found in the surrounding cultivations.
